According to Marko Rubel, a worldwide-acknowledged expert in real estate investing, there are certain rules that must be followed in order to successfully achieve wealth in the real estate market. Now, Mr. Rubel shares these rules with those who are interested in real estate as an investment vehicle.

Property investment follows rules just like any other type of investment, according to Marko Rubel, an acknowledged expert in the real estate investment field. "Working with rules keeps you disciplined and keeps the emotions out," says Mr. Rubel, creator of the Unlimited Funding Program. Now, Mr. Rubel shares his insights with those who are interested in real estate investments as a way to increase wealth.

According to Marko Rubel, on the web at <http://www.realestatemoney.com/>, one of the most important rules of real estate investing is for the investor to understand what it is that he or she wants to accomplish through this type of investment. Most investors do well if they start small and grow their investment business at a reasonable pace, giving them time to learn the realities of the real estate market. It is also important for investor to understand that no two deals are exactly alike and treat every deal differently.

Marko Rubel, on the web at <https://twitter.com/MarkoRubel>, also points out that investors must be prepared for the worst and be able to plan for setbacks. Creative financing may not have the same requirements as other types of financing, but investors may still have to make payments while waiting for properties to sell. It is also important for investors to stay away from variable-rate financing and to get everything in writing to protect themselves against market shifts. Most importantly, real estate investments should be determined by location before any other consideration.
